MANILA'S LOCUST PLAGUE.

Manila was visited yesterday morning with a shower of locusts which swarmed into town with the break of day and immediately took up headquarters in the botanical gardens and the marshy and grassy land lining the most surrounding the walled city. The commander of the army of invaders couldn't be seen at the time of going to press, but the several hundred army corps under the command are well provisioned, although it is at the expense of the civil government, the department of public parks being compelled to furnish the unknown army with rations in the shape of grass. A detachment of English sparrows were sent in pursuit of the stray bands and the slaughter in the several courtyards was something terrible; but the sparrows were not sufficiently strong to contend with the marauders, who virtually control the situation, although there are signs of continued strife on both sides. Smokeless and noiseless powder was used on both sides and even those residing in the vicinity knew nothing of the warfare being waged around them.

The millions of visitors are evidently tired out, after a long forced march, as many were compelled to make frequent stops in order to rest after their journey. Thousands of these stragglers were immediately pounced upon by the sparrows, scouts and all the Red Cross rules in the world could not stop the awful carnage that followed when the sparrows swooped down upon the helpless and weary-winged enemy. It was reported on good authority that these stragglers were but only immediately killed but actually eaten by the pursuing force, so great was the vengeance and natural animosity existing between the two hordes. While the latter statement has been confirmed, some excuse may be made for the unpardonable breach of civilized warfare when it is remembered that the conflicting forces have been natural foes for centuries past and that even the combined forces of the world have hitherto been unable to regulate the fierce animosity and hereditary hatred existing between them.

At last accounts the pestiferous visitors will be forced to seek camping grounds in the provinces, as the superintendents of parks stated that they will only have a few more hours of forage left and that they will then have to call for another appropriation to replenish the supply, if they do not move quickly.

The animals at the "Zoo" had their share in getting down the unwelcome visitors and Mr. Monk, assisted by the pigeon family in the walled portion of the animal reserve, killed everything that came their respective ways.

The mortality on the locust-grasshopper side has not been ascertained and it will probably require several months yet before anything like the actual number of deaths can be even approximately reported. Manila Cablenews.

BRYAN MAKES SPEECH

Addresses a Large Number of Democrats at Chicago.

Kansas City Platform the Only Pure Doctrine.

Chicago, July 18.—William Jennings Bryan addressed several thousand enthusiastic Democrats at the Chicago Democracy picnic at Brands Park today.

He was received with cheers and waving of hats when he stepped upon the platform. After a short introductory speech, by Mayor Harrison, Mr. Bryan spoke and was frequently interrupted by applause. In his address he made special reference to the possible candidacy of Grover Cleveland in 1904 and the latter and his supporters were evicted by the speaker. Mr. Bryan said in part:

"An ideal is as important to a party as to an individual, and must in the end determine not only the party's character but the party's destiny. The party ideal is the ideal of those who dominate its councils and control its actions and in any party worthy to be called Democratic the controlling force should be a majority of the voters of the party. "A Democratic party seeks to administer the government according to Democratic principles and its ideals of a free government is a government in which every department, legislative, executive and judicial, is administered according to the doctrine of equal rights to all and equal privileges to none. "A party with such an ideal is more closely scrutinized and more quickly criticized than a party which makes no pretension, because the world is inclined to measure a party by the standard which it sets up for itself. A party really Democratic can not do what another party might do with impunity because its own teachings will be turned upon its conduct and hypocrisy added to its other sins.

"Never before in the history of the country has there been greater need for a Democratic party with a truly Democratic ideal. The aristocracy which Hamilton led against the Democracy of Jefferson's day, and the plutocracy which Nick Biddle led against the Democracy of Jackson's day have combined to assault the Democracy of the present day and these assaults are supported by a metropolitan press more subservient to capital and more widely read than the papers of 1800 or 1832. In 1853 the Republican party under the leadership of Mark Hanna, became the open ally of organized wealth, and a victory was secured by the use of means which, when known, must be repugnant to every believer in the doctrine of self government. The purchase of votes and the coercion of employees—all these things were resorted to with an audacity never known in this country before. As a result of that election Mammon was enthroned, the manufacturers were permitted to write the tariff schedules without regard to the interests of the consumers; the financiers were allowed to dictate the policy of the treasury without regard to the interests of the country at large, and the trust magnates were permitted to bankrupt rivals, stifle competition and extort without limit. When the Spanish war occurred the syndicates in complete possession of the United States reached out anew for new fields to conquer, and they are now using the American army and a carpet-bag government to exploit the inhabitants of the Philippines, whose reverence for our institutions has thus been converted into hatred for our flag."

"Surely if there ever was a time when the preaching of the democratic gospel ought to be opportune, now is the time. The character of our party is to be determined by the manner in which it meets an opportunity which is determined by the ideal that dominates it. Will our party hesitate or take counsel of its fears? Will it abandon its championship of the people for a few offices and campaign contributions that carry with them obligations that will be made good out of the pockets of the people? The Democratic party must appeal to the Democratic sentiment of the country and the sentiment is far wider than the party. Wherever the question has been submitted in such a way that it could be acted upon independently there has always been an overwhelming majority in favor of that which was Democratic and our party can appeal successfully to this Democratic spirit if we but convince the people of our earnestness and of our fidelity to these principles.

"We are handicapped just now by the fact that the last Democratic administration that we had was more subservient to corporate dictation than any Republican administration that had preceded it and the record of that administration has been a millstone about the party's neck ever since. The influence exerted by Wall street over the administration policy the use of patronage to reward those who betrayed their constituents and the employment of the most reprehensible of Republican methods, made the administration a stain in the nostrils of the people and kept in the Republican party, many who were disgusted at that party's course. The odium which Mr. Cleveland's second administration brought upon the party which elected him did more to defeat the party than any one plank of the Chicago platform, or even than all the planks that were most severely criticized. But for the reputation of the administration, it would have been impossible to make any campaign at all, and even the reputation, thorough and complete as it was, could not completely deflect the party.

"The greatest menace that the party has to meet today is, not the probability, but the possibility of the party's return to the position that it occupied from 1892 to 1898. This danger is not so imminent as the corporation-controlled papers make it appear, but in so far as it threatens, it paralyzes the energy of the party and nullifies its promises. Such a return would indicate a degradation of the party's ideals and a perversion of its purpose."

"If the Democratic party will stand erect, face the future with confidence, defend the right of the people and protect their interests whenever attacked—whether the attack comes from the financiers, the monopolists, the tariff barons or from the imperialists—it can look with confidence for a revolution of sentiment that will give us a victory worth having, and this victory, when it comes will not end, as the victory of 1892 did in the demoralization of the party, but in the building up of a Democratic organization which will deal aggressively with all the evils of government and find its bulwark in the affections and confidences of the masses."
